50.	FIVE DAY WEEK STRAW PEOPLE: [same]	LP. Listed as one of Record Collector's '100 Greatest Psychedelic Records' (nestling immediately below the Moody Blues 'In Search Of A Lost Chord'), this album deserves a place in any discerning record collection. It relates an imagined "typical weekend of the average nine-to-five worker" as they recounted in an interview at the time. The songs had been written by David Montague and Guy Mascolo, who had first met when they were hairdressers in Clapham in 1963. Guy had just co-founded a salon with his brother Toni, which since then has mushroomed into the hairdressing juggernaut that is 'Toni and Guy'.	Psych	?	?	17.75

101.	N.S.U.: Turn me on or turn me down	LP. An air of mystery surrounds this album, and indeed, even the label on which it was originally released. 103.	ORIGINAL SOUNDTRACK: COLOUR CLIMAX by various artists	The LP is pressed on what is euphemistically described as 'milky clear vinyl'. This is the holy grail for anybody interested in the history of the soundtrack to adult i.e. porn films of the last 50 years. Other pieces are compositions that have accompanied film festival showings of more bold and well-known erotic classics. They are performed under the umbrella name "Barn Jehovi", by a myriad of musicians with whom Dave Collins has worked; they shall, for the moment, remain anonymous.
